Defending the "Bad" Choice

The idea

Take a stance on a polarizing decision in your art (leaving a mistake, using a hated font, mixing bass too loud). Explain exactly why the "bad" choice was actually the right choice for the feeling of the piece.

Objective

Assert your artistic vision and drive engagement through a polarized stance.

Why this works

It proves you have a backbone. Defending a weird choice makes you look confident. It also drives massive comment engagement, as purists will argue while true fans will defend your vision.

Hook bank

Direct / Why I intentionally left a huge mistake in the final mix of this song.
Curiosity / Everyone told me to fix this one part of the track, but I refused...
Personality / I know this vocal is out of tune, and I do not care. Here's why.
Sarcastic / A formal apology to the audio engineers who have to listen to my mixing decisions.

How to execute

1. Plan the opener

Try this opener as a starting point: “Why I intentionally left a huge mistake in the final mix of this song”. Choose the first image or moment that makes its promise clear.

2. Make the first pass

Producer: "My manager told me to take this 808 out because it's violently clipping." Plays the distorted beat. "But this song is about anxiety. Anxiety isn't clean. It's loud and ruins everything."

3. Shape the sequence

Use this order for your first cut: Hook > The "Bad" Audio/Visual > The Critique > Your Defense. Watch the first cut muted to check that captions and visuals carry the hook, then play it with sound to check levels.

4. Check and publish

Use this call to action as your starting point: "What is a 'rule' in your creative field that you love to break?" Preview the finished post and verify that any link, tag, or instruction works.

Suggested sequence

Hook > The "Bad" Audio/Visual > The Critique > Your Defense.

Call to action

"What is a 'rule' in your creative field that you love to break?"

What to avoid

Demonstrate the choice in context so people can judge its effect. Avoid claiming a personal preference makes everyone else's technique wrong.

Make it yours

1. Creatives: Defend using Comic Sans in a serious design project for ironic context.
2. Singers: Defend leaving a heavy breath or a voice crack in the final master.
3. Rappers: Defend an unconventional, off-beat flow choice that critics called "sloppy."

Before you post

Read the caption out loud. Check that the first frame and the opener make the same promise. Verify captions, credits, and any link or tag. Save a copy of the final asset and caption so you can reuse what works.
